

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A hard disk drive (HDD) stores a plurality of image data in a first format in a compressed form. An image format converter converts the format of the image data to a second format. The second format is a general format, as such as JPEG or TIFF. When transmitting the image data to an external PC, the image data in both the first format and the second format is transmitted.